Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Across the Continent The Chicago, Milwaukee Puget Sound Railway, the Pacific Coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee St. Paul Railway, in the few years since its actual construction was commenced, has opened to settlement a vast new country, a region embracing the far west Dakotas, the plains and uplands of Montana, and the mountains, where still unknown stores of minerals are hidden away. It has crossed the Missouri and the Columbia rivers, the most famous streams of this continent, and penetrated to the heart of the great riches of Idaho and Washington, to their wonderful fruit-producing valleys, to the hills, which carry on their rugged slopes unbroken phalanxes of giant timber, sufficient to supply the Western Hemisphere for hundreds of years to come. From the Missouri River to Puget Sound the new Northwest is vibrant with life and responding to the activities of busy communities. This railroad has created new markets for eastern manufactures, and this empire of the new West is producing in boundless quantity all that makes for the wealth of the nation. Practically from the laying of the first steel on the Puget Sound road the development has progressed by leaps and bounds, and with the final completion and the inauguration of fast passenger service this railroad is able to introduce its patrons to a widespread prospect of highly cultivated country, to young cities of phenomenal growth, to industries that would do credit to old communities, and to all the operations and busy life incident to commercial prosperity.
