It became clear that the eyes of Civilization were for the moment focussed upon Azalea, and the congratulatory telegrams which Mr. Spode received from various organizations, as well as private individuals, were numerous. The Crusaders Club--the well-known Ladies Club in London--telegraphed: Well done, Azalea! You have hammered the last nail into the coffin of the greatest pest of the age, the husband. The president of the Equality, a Socialist Society, sent a message as follows: Hail, Comrades of Azalea! We struggling to be free salute you. The Society of St. Peter in Vinculo--the recognized organization of unhappy husbands--sent ten words: O terque quaterque beati Azaleans! Come over and help us --a combination of Virgil and an anonymous writer equally well known. The despatch from the Soho branch of Les Amis de...
