The progressive action of the unit switches can be arrested and held at any point by moving the controller handle back to the first position. Storage Battery.--The current for the operation of the magnet valves is secured by a storage battery of seven cells, having a capacity of 40 ampere hours. Each car has two sets of battery; one being on charge with the lighting circuit, while the other is on the operating circuit. The positive side of the battery is connected to the controller and is carried through the entire train as one of the seven wires of the train line. The negative is connected on each car to the negative side of the magnet valves. This arrangement localizes the current demand from a battery to its own car. The use of a low voltage battery to operate the electromagnetic valves is one of the advantages of the system Fig. 92.--ELEMENTARY DIAGRAM OF CIRCUITS OF UNIT SWITCH CONTROL. obviating the necessity of running high voltage circuits through the train, and making the operation of the control independent of fluctuations of the line voltage. Car Connectors.--The connectors employed to...
